SHELLEY'S STORY

BY SHELLEY NELSON, CV CO-CHAIR

This is my journey to becoming a Co-Chair of the Constituent Voice. I started receiving services from New Center Community Health in 2010. This is where I discovered information about clubhouses. I became a clubhouse member at the Phoenix Clubhouse that same year. I worked in member services there, and helped other members receive documents and entitlements such as their social security cards, birth certificates and housing. I taught members basic reading, math, and English. I also led psychosocial groups and participated in plays with other members centered around recovery. In 2016, I was approached by Dr. Johnson, our director, and Thea, our assistant director, who asked me if I would like to become a Peer Support Specialist. They explained to me what a Peer Support Specialist does. I filled out the application, was accepted, and started my internship that same year at Our Place Drop-In Center. In 2016, I was hired in as an employee there and became certified as a Peer. I have subsequently helped members learn about their rights (such as being treated with dignity and respect when receiving services) and showed them how to contact Recipients Rights if they feel their rights have been violated. Currently, I facilitate groups on self-care and recovery bingo, and help members apply for entitlements.

In 2017, I was asked by Linda Burton if I would like to become a Constituents' Voice (CV) member. I decided to apply and was accepted. As a CV member, I attend the CV meetings and am on the Empower, and the Engage Action Group Committees. I have also attended and participated in the ILPLT and the QISC Committee meetings at the Detroit Wayne Integrated Health Network (DWIHN). I've participated in the Walk A Mile In My Shoes Rally in Lansing, MI. where I helped members who live in Wayne County register to vote. I've stood on the capitol grounds and publicly spoken to let our legislators know about our mental health needs and how they should be approached. I've helped bring members to voting drives at the Considine Center in Detroit, MI., and demonstrated to members how the process works. I was honored to have hosted the Dreams Come True Luncheon where Michael Squirewell and I were the Masters of Ceremony, and members we serve were awarded $500.00 to pursue their dreams.

In 2012, I was presented with the Reaching for the Stars award from the Detroit Wayne County Community Mental Health Agency. In 2016, I received an award for Outstanding Consumer of the Year by Behavioral Health Professional(s) Inc. In 2024, I received the Cookie Gant Award from the State of Michigan. Previously, I was the interim Associate Director at Our Place Drop-In Center and the Floor Leader. I would like to say this has been a journey for me, and I want to thank the people who have come into my life and helped me along my way. As a Co-Chair of the CV, I look forward to working with each and every one of you. I will work towards making this journey informative, empowering, and engaging. I will advocate for the members that we serve in our communities, so they can be connected to any services or events that can help them with their recovery or other issues they may be experiencing.

REAL TALK: PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES AND HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS BY ROBERT SPRUCE, STAFF

On March 27, 2025, DWIHN commemorated Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month, presenting information to the Developmentally Disabled community. This year's guests were four individuals who gave their worldview on how people with disabilities can have healthy friendships and relationships. This much needed conversation took place on Zoom. Jamie Junior, Kenya Harper, and Eric Miller talked about friendship. They said friendships should be based on respect and kindness. They shared how to ask for help and choosing places everyone can go. They stated that using a wheelchair is just one part of a person—it doesn't tell you everything about who they are.

The group talked about love and dating. Eric spoke about his own dating life. Kenya stated that parents sometimes worry when their kids start to date. Jamie shared helpful tips about things people with disabilities might not learn when they are young.

Darlene Jones talked about how important it is to learn about safety. She said we must care about our bodies, feelings, and how to stay safe. Mary Sheen agreed and said learning about these things can help people feel strong and happy.

This event was more than just a discussion. It showed us that everyone deserves to feel loved, respected and to have meaningful friendships—no matter who they are. Healthy relationships are for everyone.

DWIHN FAMILIES RECOGNIZE IMPROVEMENTS IN SERVICES

MARGARET KEYES-HOWARD, UNIT MANAGER MEMBER ENGAGEMENT

Over several years, we have shared how important Customer Satisfaction is as it relates to the experience our members have as they encounter various points of our system. The review of feedback from surveys, focus groups, and other sources that measure this satisfaction is under analysis constantly within a procedure that we call Continuous Process Improvement. Improving satisfaction is a goal that is supported by every unit, department and staff at DWIHN to ensure that the individuals we serve, and their families see the advances that we are building to make things easier, better, and more efficient. When a member has a positive experience and enjoys the engagement they have with their services, they are likely to have better outcomes in their healthcare journey.

During the 2024 ECHO Survey period for Children, families respond on how they perceive aspects of the care their children receive. Over the several years that DWIHN has been surveying families about their children, we have had a 14% improvement score and in these areas, there were no negative scores reflected in this year's report.

Learning about how DWIHN analyzes data and feedback about satisfaction empowers members to better understand how the system responds to those we serve. The table below is a snapshot of the feedback we have received over the past four years, including the newest scores.

The table provides a snapshot of the ECHO Children's Survey Member Experience scores over the last four years (evaluation period 2023) for the 2024 reporting year. The table also includes DWIHN's baseline study conducted in 2017. The full survey represents composite scores of 1,394 respondents and composite scores of several areas, including perceived improvement over the evaluation period. A full report can be found on our website at www.dwihn.org. DWIHN will conduct a new review of the FY 2024 evaluation period during FY 2025.

CLUBHOUSES

BY LINDA BURTON, PEER AGENT

What is a clubhouse? A clubhouse is a place where people living with mental illness can have opportunities to find friends, employment, housing, education, and access to medical and psychiatric services in a safe environment. A member can also have social and economic inclusion there. A clubhouse can help a member stay out of the hospital, from being incarcerated and lower their chances of committing suicide.

A clubhouse is more than a program, it is a community of people who are working toward a common goal to get their lives back.

A clubhouse has a Work-Ordered Day. Professional staff and members work together to make sure the daily operations of the clubhouse are done. Unlike a drop-In center, which provides more socialization time, a clubhouse focuses more on an individual's strengths and talents. It is run by professionals working with members. It has many different units that a member can choose from. For example, a member who loves to cook might be in the culinary unit that cooks all the meals of that clubhouse. That member will learn skills that can help them if they decide to get a transitional employment job in a restaurant. A clerical unit might focus on clerical skills such as answering the phones, typing, filing etc. which will provide skills for a member who might want to work in an office. A clubhouse has many resources and community partnerships that will help members find employment. The staff can help them with coaching, self-care, training, recovery, supports, and educational skills so they can rejoin in activities in the community in which they live.

A clubhouse has a set of standards that they follow every day. The benefits of a clubhouse are as follows:

- A Clubhouse is a community,
- Clubhouses are participative,
- Clubhouses help end isolation,
- Clubhouses offer members vocational training,
- Clubhouses offer return to work opportunities,
- Clubhouses offer wellness programs,
- The clubhouse has been proven to have a positive outcome for members.

<https://clubhouse-intl.org/resources>

A clubhouse model is centered around members having choices. Membership is voluntary and a member can stay involved as long as they want. Once you are a member, you will always be a member.

RECOVERY 2

BY CLARENCE RUFF, PEER AGENT

Recovery involves making a commitment to change addictive behavior and to abstain from using alcohol and various other substances.

This article will follow up on my previous one published in the winter edition of the Persons Points of View newsletter and will expand on the fact that addiction is still prevalent. The condition known as substance use disorder (SUD) is a disease that affects a person's brain and behavior, impacting the person, their family, and often their community. SUD can be a result of the use of legal or illegal drugs or medications. Mind-altering substances such as alcohol, marijuana, and nicotine are also drugs. When one becomes addicted to them, the person may not be able to discontinue using despite the harm these drugs are causing without seeking professional help.

SUD can start with experimental or recreational use of substances in social situations. For some, particularly when referring to the use of opioids, addiction may begin when someone starts taking a medication that wasn't prescribed to them. Taking someone else's medication is risky and can be deadly. It is very important not to use medications that have been prescribed for someone else. The risk of addiction and how fast one can become addicted varies by the drug or substance and some drugs (such as opioid painkillers) have a higher risk of addiction than others (such as marijuana). Thank you.

PREPARING FOR THE CHALLENGES OF BECOMING A PEER

BY DELORA WILLIAMS, STAFF

Individuals considering becoming a Peer should be aware of several potential challenges, one of which is understanding how to engage with staff and members within the organization and the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services.

Organizational Standards

- Engaging appropriately with members while supporting their Person-Centered Plan goals
- Locating resources
- Feeling valued while working with staff
- Maintaining one's recovery
- Being prepared to use de-escalation tools if members become irate during face-to-face encounters
- Learning Peer roles
- Learning policies and procedures of the organizations

Michigan Department of Health and Human Services Peer Requirements

- Complete a Peer Support Specialist (PSS) or Peer Recovery Coach (PRC) application
- Attend a 40-hour week training
- Pass the required exam
- Maintain required number of Continuing Education Credits (CEC)
- Obtain 32 additional Continuing Education Credit hours every two years
- Follow Ethical Rules
- Be nonjudgement and empathetic when providing services

Although fulfilling and maintaining the necessary requirements to become a Peer may be challenging, doing so has its advantages. Helping others along their recovery journey can be a healing experience for both the Peer and the members they support. Peers get to witness personal growth while making a difference in the lives of others.

While training to become a Peer, remember you are not alone. The Peer community provides a supportive network, always ready to offer guidance and understanding.

SOCIAL MEDIA AND MENTAL HEALTH

BY MICHAEL SHAW, STAFF

Most of us are familiar with social media. Apps like Facebook, X, LinkedIn, Instagram, etc. are used by millions of people throughout the world. Although many use these apps to stay in touch with family, friends and to meet new people, there can be a downside to them that can affect one's mental health. Research has shown that excessive use of social media can lead to isolation, cyberbullying, unrealistic physical expectations leading to body dysmorphia, eating disorders, depression, and anxiety. Furthermore, blue light emanating from devices such as computer and cellphone screens can disrupt sleep patterns also leading to depression and anxiety. In addition, there is a lot of misinformation, disinformation, hate speech, and scams on apps such as Facebook and X. The young and the elderly are particularly vulnerable because they may not be aware of the dangers posed by certain persons on the internet.

Socialization skills are often developed through in-person, face-to-face interactions. Body language and becoming attuned to the cues of deception are particularly important for young people. One of the biggest deficits of most social media apps is that a person may not know with whom they are really communicating. Catfishing on the internet is the act of someone pretending to be another person. The anonymity of communicating through cyberspace facilitates the ease of this kind of deception. Predators can target children, the elderly, and anyone who may be lonely and in search of companionship. The vulnerable can become victims for sexual and/or monetary exploitation. There have been instances of young people being catfished, deceived into sending nude photos online, and then being coerced into meeting for sex under threat that the photos will be posted on social media. This type of exploitation can lead to sexual assault, shaming, cyberbullying, depression, anxiety, and even suicide. There have been instances of persons being coerced into sending large sums of money to persons who have "catfished" them online. Persons can also be enticed into meeting and then forced or deceived into trafficking drugs, sex trafficking, or participating in terrorist activities, such as joining a group like ISIS. This type of exploitation can lead to post-traumatic stress Disorder, depression, anxiety, and other mental health conditions. This can also affect the victim's ability to trust and develop relationships in the future.

TRIGGERS

BY DWIGHT HARRIS, PEER AGENT

As humans, we all experience triggers that can evoke strong emotions, reactions, and impulses. Triggers are stimuli that can come from our environment, memories, or sensory experiences, such as sights, sounds, smells, or tastes. These triggers can transport us back to a moment in time, evoking feelings and reactions that may have been buried deep within us.

Triggers are a natural part of life, and everyone experiences them differently. While some people may be more resilient and able to navigate triggers with ease, others may struggle to cope with the emotions and reactions that arise. This is especially true for individuals who have experienced trauma, which can be caused by social determinants such as childhood abuse, neglect, or displacement.

Trauma can have a profound impact on an individual's life, leading to mental health challenges, criminalization, and a range of other negative outcomes. However, it's essential to recognize that trauma is not a destiny, and that individuals have the power to heal and cope with their triggers.

So, how can we develop the coping skills and mechanisms needed to navigate life's triggers? The answer lies in self-reflection, self-care, and a willingness to confront our past experiences. By acknowledging our triggers and taking steps to address them, we can begin to heal and develop the resilience needed to thrive in life.

As essential workers, citizens, and individuals, it's our responsibility to prioritize self-care and take care of ourselves before we can effectively help others. When we take care of ourselves, we become better equipped to cope with the challenges of life, including triggers. By doing so, we can become more productive, compassionate, and effective in our personal and professional lives.

In conclusion, triggers are an inevitable part of life, but they don't have to control us. By understanding our triggers, developing coping mechanisms, and prioritizing self-care, we can take the first steps towards healing, growth, and resilience.

INTERVIEW WITH CERTIFIED PEER SUPPORT SPECIALIST ALANDIS EDMONDS INTERVIEWED BY MICHAEL SHAW, STAFF

Question: Tell us a little bit about yourself, how did your lived experience get you involved in becoming a Certified Peer in Wayne County?

Response: I guess I would have to say it chose me. I have a family that would be considered part of the vulnerable population. I've been advocating for my children for a long time. They're adults now, young adults, and I still advocate for them. I'm the guardian for two of them. I've wanted to help people for a long time. I didn't even know what a peer was until I started working at the agency where I am at currently. Before this job, I did similar work at a nonprofit, but they didn't have anything like a peer position. I discovered what a peer does when I started working for Team Wellness.

ALANDIS EDMONDS

Question: Tell us where you work and what you do at your job site?

Response: I work for Team Wellness in the overnight guest program. We are not a shelter. A lot of individuals, agencies, entities, hospitals, etc, think we are a shelter, but we're not. We aren't zoned to be a shelter, but we have a program. To me, it's like an Underground Railroad stop. People arrive and stay until they can get what they need and move on to the next part of their process. So yes, I am a certified peer support specialist for the overnight guest program at Team Wellness Center. I assist my members with resources. I help them if they need to make a phone call, access on-site resources such as clothing and off-site transportation, so they can participate in activities and do things they enjoy. That's pretty much what I do.

Question: What are the things that you find are challenging for you by holding this position?

Response: For me, I guess... the gray area would be recovery. That's not my story. I don't have anything against someone that may be in recovery. A lot of people just assume that everybody is a recovering this or recovering that. That's not my story. I do have my mental health issues, but recovery is not part of them. I try to stay in my lane and if something is beyond what I can do or control, I know to ask for assistance. Sometimes, when people are in recovery or should be in recovery or treatment, they may not listen too well. It may be hard to get them to sit still or to come in sometimes because they're so used to being out in the streets.

Question: What are the things that you find inspire you about your role as a Certified Peer?

Response: Well, I have an awesome peer lead. She's very supportive and helpful. We work as a team. We work together, inspirationally as well. When I can help somebody succeed at their goal, objective, or whatever they are trying to achieve, it makes me feel good and happy. I like knowing that I've helped somebody get to the next step, or maybe understand something they didn't quite understand before.

Question: What do you do for self-care to maintain your overall wellbeing and ability to serve?

Response: So... I like to pamper myself with a little bit of quiet time. I like to go to museums and libraries. The Main Library downtown is really nice and big. It's so quiet in there. I don't know exactly why, but I just love it. It makes me feel so good. In order to continue helping others, I have to take care of myself. I try to do things I enjoy. That decreases the stress or anxiety I might be dealing with in my personal life. I'm trying to find a better work balance. I'm working on that. Work-life balance, yeah.

Question: If there was one thing you wish that the DWIHN mental health system could do to use Certified Peers for what would that be?

Response: I would say training or retraining that a peer can add to their roster that will help them later on down the line. It's always a good thing, you know, because you can always learn something new, something different. Sometimes when things aren't working, you may need to try something else. Often peers don't get a lot of support. Some people think peers don't do anything. More recognition for what we do would be nice. You know, I don't look for it. I can't speak for anyone else, but I don't look for it. It's just nice to know that somebody is recognizing what you're doing. Your hard work is not going to waste.

Question: Is there anything else you would like to share with us?

Response: Well, I am going through my own personal challenges right now. I still have to put on my happy face when I go to work. When I arrive at work, I leave personal issues outside the door. Again, I love the population I serve. I'm just trying to manage myself and my responsibilities. Recently, I had to go to an appointment with my son. He's 21, autistic, and still needs assistance. I have a daughter that has her mental health diagnosis and challenges. I assist her as well. That's pretty much my story at this point. I would like to eventually slide over into the other part of my life where it's not so busy or hectic, but I'm always going to be available to support and advocate for my young adults. Thank you. I appreciate you all, I really do. This just popped into my head to say before we end the interview. I would like to suggest that social workers go out on crisis calls with officers. I would also like to suggest that maybe peers could be placed in libraries across the city or even the state to assist people that may need help and resources. Peers may be able to assist people when they come in, you know, because homeless people frequent the libraries as well. They may be looking for stuff and need a little extra support or just somebody to help them. Peers may save somebody's life. You never know.

Did You Know?

Effective September 2021, the state began offering another local dispute resolution option for individuals receiving Behavioral Health Services. It is called Mediation. This is a way to provide another avenue for members as well as our provider network to come to a resolution in areas where there may be a disagreement or conflict.

Mediation does not take the place of DWIHN's ability to address a member's Appeal, Grievance or Recipient Rights complaint. It is important to note that only the member or their legal guardian can request mediation services. If you are interested in learning more contact:

The Mediation Helpline at 1-844-3-MEDIATE (1-844-363-3428)
